Queen Anne/Magnolia Service Center Opens at New Location!

"Little City Hall" will feature services available to the community

SEATTLE – The Department of Neighborhoods held an open house for the Queen Anne/Magnolia community this evening for one of 13 "little city halls" located throughout the city. Among many things, people can access the internet, look for and apply for city jobs, use a large room for community meetings, and find out information on city programs and services.

The Magnolia/Queen Anne Neighborhood Service Center moved just across the street, but the new location is a newer facility co-located with the Uptown Alliance, a local community group, and State Senator Jeanne Kohl-Welles. This is now a one-stop shop for anyone needing information or to get connected to their community, city, and state government.

Director Stella Chao said "The Department of Neighborhoods and the City know how important it is to have local neighborhood access to city information and meeting spaces for community-building. The community's comments made a big difference in our choosing of this site. The new space is easy for community members to access the Neighborhood Service Center."

"This is a great location to serve the community, I look forward to providing more help to the people and neighborhoods here," said Christa Dumpys, the Neighborhood District Coordinator for the Queen Anne/Magnolia Neighborhood Service Center. She works as the liaison between communities and the city on local issues such as development, public safety, transportation and parks.

Along with the 13 Neighborhood Service Centers, the Department of Neighborhoods operates programs like the Neighborhood Matching Fund, P-Patches, and Historic Preservation and co-leads the Updates to Neighborhood Plans with the Department of Planning and Development.
